National Weather Service April to June 2025 Outlook: For the Lower Rio Grande Valley/Deep South Texas Region

- A normal to warmer than normal conditions are expected to continue during the April-June 2025 timeframe.
- After weeks of dryness and drought (D0-Abnormally Dry to D3-Extreme Drought) conditions expanding across the region, a late March drought busting deluge of heavy rainfall came over the area.
- Despite a drier than normal outlook, precipitation odds are a toss-up, with showers and thunderstorms that could produce heavy rainfall and localized flooding has to be taken into consideration through the remainder of the Spring Season.
- Confidence remains high that total combined storage will remain at or near record lows through for the first part of 2025.
- Water Conservation is Key Until Further Notice! “Stage 2/3” Restrictions continued through early Spring 2025 and are likely to continue until further notice based on inflows from Amistad and Falcon.
